

All About Theodore Bear

Theodore Bear is a peaceful soul who will hum as he cracks open another dusty old book before bed every evening, at precisely nine o'clock. He will have spent the day wearing a mellow smile which he shares with everyone he passes. It has been a while since Theodore frowned, in fact.

When not guzzling another steaming pot of freshly brewed tea, you can find this bear scribbling his thoughts onto any surface he can get his paws on – notepads, the backs of receipts, or some kitchen roll if he's in a spot of a rush. His friends tease that he should be called 'Grandpa Bear' instead of Theodore, but he simply chuckles and agrees: after all, he cannot deny that technology puzzles him greatly; that he loves an armchair and a roaring fire more than the television; and that his loves of landscape painting and mug collecting are a little ... unique, to say the least.

To be cosy is a great joy to this bear, as you can tell. He does love to don a raincoat and plod out on a walk in the wind, but far prefers the feeling of coming home afterwards. Kicking off mud-speckled boots before sinking into his armchair, warm again at last, brings Theodore a happy glow which will not fade through the night. He is a happy little soul, every single day.
